GENERAL GRANT'S WIDOW.

Representatives of the Oregon Daily at the Bar of the Court of Admiralty

A Noble and Intelligent Lady Relates the Story of a Memorable Life History—Fable Events as Seen From Woman's Standpoint.

New York, Nov 1.—Nellie Bixby, the World's correspondent has just had a very interesting interview with a lady who was for a long time closely connected with one of the most famous characters in United States history.

Mrs. Julia Dent Grant the only living woman whose husband served two terms as president of the United States, resides at 8 East Sixtieth Street, New York. The house is within a stone's throw of Central Park on a wide residence street and is historic as the place where Gen. Grant spent many of his last as well as his first days.

I was somewhat nervous about my visit to Mrs. or say Mrs. Grant. I only knew of her as the wife of the famous general, the successful hostess for eight years in the White house; the woman who had, in making a tour of the world, been received as a queen in every civilized land. Would any one wonder at my apprehension when women of so much greater birth so often try to carry off all attempts at approach? But I was wrong.

As we sat down, Mrs. Grant and with a smile on her gentle, good-looking face had been exchanged a few words by the hand of a maid, and seated herself on a lounge, most cordially near me. Nellie Bixby is a little thing.

"Oh no no," broke in both holding her finger up playfully she continued.

That not being content with exposing the Blackwell Island insane asylum—as and benefiting it wonderfully—and exposing Philip, the great Albany lobbyist who had must go to Central Park and allow herself to be made and then tell all about it in the World, so that now none of the men dare walk at a gait while driving there, lest she be Nellie Bixby.

Why that's a shame! I replied and we both laughed. I mean not altogether in fun.

I will tell you anything I can of the White house—she contains more gold than a queen's crown.

The other day I was in there, were the happiest of my life. I named the entire time as a series of dreams of happiness and it broke my heart to leave.

SECRETARY AT LEAVING THE WHITE HOUSE.

Indeed I know, she continued with a tremulous break in her voice, "that if all the years I had the day before left Washington could have been gathered together in a reservoir of state could have safely achieved them and escaped all be should it have on the following winter. It seemed just like home and I never wanted to leave.

Were you at all nervous when you first want there?

Oh no you know it was different with me from what it was with most of the ladies who had been hostesses there. I always had the sympathy of the people everywhere, and I had grown quite used to them and then, ahead of the army in Washington our receptions were as brilliant as those in the White house.

When she was with an army in the South she used to have carousals of Grant's house on reception day. You never saw them? Well they pictured ladies sitting on the opposite side of the room with their slips off the shoulders and the men on the other side of the window. They were very sumptuous to the White house but not half as terrible for me. I don't think any thing ever had. I was afraid that my husband would be sick but

And forgetfulness of all else.

What did you do first when you came to the White house?

Put things in order. It was just dread full. There were in the lounge room together and the library, sharp corners, roses on it as big as washbowls. So I gave my undivided attention to torting things out. I had the sofa in perfect order and, at last, got them right and then remained with me all the time we were there.

THE EXECUTIVE MANSION EASILY MANAGED.

Is it difficult to manage household affairs at the White house?

Indeed it is not so much as elsewhere. For three receptions I give suggestions to the steward and when everything was ready he would make a speech to us all during the war. This was the most important of my work.

At the end of the month we do not get very well so the sky robes would put fresh flowers at my plate and then not so hot at other places. I think it is not so bad as the sky robes as my brother and sister don't care for them for the Union.

It is not so bad as the sky robes as my brother and sister don't care for them for the Union.

Indeed it is not so bad as the sky robes as my brother and sister don't care for them for the Union.

Never once when he first started from Georgia our old home took Fred with him. I sat on a little pony and I urged his father to take him along. When Ulysses took him but Fred said that the boy was too young. Alexander had to wait until the next day when he was to go to the White house.

He accompanied Philip I wrote which I thought was sufficient to make Ulysses obey but he did not. Fred is not Alexander's son and Fred and I were sent back home. ROUSING RALLY LAST NIGHT.

The Blaine Club Holds a Big Enthusiastic Meeting.

Fifty Thousand People in the Hall—Inspiring Speeches by Hon Rufus Mallory and Senator Mitchell.

The very large assembly that gathered at Union hall last night, was of a body of conquerors who had come together for a grand review over victories gained. It was from appearing so happy and well satisfied audience, and it is safe to say that few if any democrats were present. Their faces flushed with triumphal smiles, and every move portraying an unbounded enthusiasm they had come to ratify the victory of the republican party and the election of Benjamin Harrison to the presidency of the United States.

At 8 o'clock every seat in the hall was occupied and a short time later standing room was scarce. The platform was crowded upon to the last corn and the rear of the room the last row of chairs to the door was one mass of people. It is estimated that at least 1000 people were in the hall upon their being a large sprinkling of ladies.

The meeting was called to order shortly after 8 o'clock by the president of the Union club.

Meares Jones and Loring started the familiar air "My Country 'tis of Thee" the audience joining in the chorus and the large hall responded with the words of patriotic patriotic song.

On motion it was voted that on account of the importance of the meeting and in view of the fact that it was called for a special purpose, the regular order of business of the Union club be suspended.

It was voted that instead of the usual

Mr. Mai on then proposed therefore for Mr. Mai to sing again and boy, it was a success.

After singing he was called upon to speak.

After singing he responded with Marching Through Georgia, the president introduced the first speaker of the evening James O. Meers.

He gave a brief history of the Blaine club and spoke of the great good it had done. Much of the success of the party he said was due to the club's untiring efforts and hard work. He then spoke of the lesson taught by the campaign and issued decided and strong resolutions.

Long before the meeting began the Hon. Rufus Mallory that gentleman though first asking to be excused was obliged to take his station on the platform.

After singing "The Red, White and Blue" in the course of which the entire audience again joined Mr. Mallory addressed himself to the large audience. Mr. Mallory spoke at some length.

It may judge of the sensations that may have been experienced by those who were present there as I did not feel power in my own there is just cause for your enthusiasm and rejoicing. I cannot find language to give expression to the gratification and satisfaction I feel at the result of the election. It is for me to realize that it is really true that the prosperity and happiness of our nation that three days ago hung trembling in the balance should after a few brief hours be firm and secure.

"I can yet feel the vigour I felt in 1888 when Blaine was nominated as the republican candidate for the presidency by the Chicago convention.

Then I was filled with anxiety and two parties I said to myself and believed in my heart that there could be no question as to how the issue should stand and would be decided. I relied upon the intelligence and good sense of the people.

"Looking down the annals of the republican party, turning over the leaves of the book containing the record of its doings, I find no blot or blemish to mar its fame, and only what the party would be proud to own as principles that lift up and enlighten the people.

I was so sure of the success of the republican candidate that I even told my friends that if that contest was announced I was surprised that such a thing could be possible. When it was declared for a man like Blaine, the ablest statesman of America and a man for whom the whole country could be proud to be defended by a man like Cleveland, due to the circumstances of the country I was more than surprised. It was a hard blow that after a regime of twenty four years of successful administration of the affairs of the republic should be turned to the hands of a man who had never known an enemy.

The democratic elected their president but were disappointed with their success.

In the first two years of Cleveland's reign there was nothing done to mark a change in administration. Cleverland's policy was the policy of the republican party.

Property continued, and his success seemed to be the crowning point of the democratic party's administration. It was the impression that if he so desired he could be his own successor. Even the republican party itself could not much complain.

The fact that the democratic party was not successful in its recent attempt to win the South. The only good thing that they could say was that the government continued as under the preceding administration home.

"One thing the South knew would make in democratic politics was the fact that if the pauper and negro labor of the South could be properly utilized it would give them a supremacy over the North which could only be affected by a movement of negroes immigrated on imports of the North. They told Cleveland that protection was important to the best interests of the country and that he must follow their wishes and desires. Cleveland, notwithstanding the surprise of many Republicans and their devotion to the Southern cause. The fact of going in league with the democrats of the South was the turning point in the campaign and secured a decided victory for the republican party. It was a bright meteor out of a dark night. Cleveland's pronouncements against protection flashed the light of a republic's victory across the Atlantic. The people of the South but condemnation of the theories of Cleve and his friends but I am thankful for the condition it brought about the people.

"Cleveland's administration has been one of trying and inconsistencies. Cleveland would have hands off the business of protection and take the bread out of the mouths of American laborers that he may feed the people of Great Britain. Not least among the inconsistencies that lead us to express admiration for our statesman is the fact that he matched with the men of the South.

Then followed an exhaustive review of the military records of Cleveland and Harron. Harron's record in his army in the hour of her greatest need. When 300,000 of American soldiers responded to the call of Lincoln. Harron left home and friends and fought bravely for his country. A very creditable record commences with the time of the draft when he made his way to the recruiting office, and hired a recruit to take his place.

Following this he spoke of the president's personal life and in his opinion the comparative standing in the army of veterans who should have the votes of the country. A president and his wife offered defeat at the last election. Mr. Mitchell's speech was interesting with frequent plaus and logic and contained cheering.

The audience was then favored with a speech by the band who were received with much satisfaction that two encores had to begin.

The last speaker of the evening was Senator J. H. Mitchell. When introduced by the president of the club the senator was greeted with loud cheering.

After a short speech he prefaced his remarks by stating that he never felt happier in his life with the exception of one occasion when it was the time when the arrows of the rebel were abated, and Grant marched victoriously to Richmond.

"I am sorry to say for repudiation and the withdrawal of protection. I congratulate the Blaine club. I congratulate Blaine, Harrison and friends.

He then spoke of the importance of the western people in the national defense and the necessity for the states and districts to be on the alert, to defend their liberty and all that is good and great and every soldier who fought in the arm of the North.

"Never since 1860 was there so much involved as in the presidential contest just ended. The twelve million voters, five hundred thousand soldiers, and the whole nation had a hand. That verdict was in favor of all that pertains to the best interests of America. The election of Harrison means that the supreme court shall remain organized in the same manner that it has been organized since it means that four more Justices shall be admitted into the Union. It means that Washington territory shall form one of the galaxy of states in the Union. These are our great achievements. We have made our birthright ours, shall not only be cast at the ballot box, but that they shall also be sacredly counted. It means that we shall be men among men.

He then spoke with a great deal of emphasis on his gratitude for the result of his speech.

"At the conclusion of his speech which was listened to with much interest and frequently applauded Senator Mitchell read in full a portion of a letter from President

Forrest of New Jersey.

The dispatch which was addressed to him personally read as follows:

"I am sorry to say for repudiation and
